MEETING ONE WEEK LATER

Due to the fact that the first Wednesday in January fell on a holiday, New Year's Day, the regular meeting of the Daly City Merchants Association was postponed for one week.

The regular meeting will be held on next Wednesday evening, January 8.

Important business is on the calendar, and all members should attend.

COUNTY PRESS ASSOCIATION TO MEET MONDAY

First Dinner Meeting Of New Year Will See Installation Of Current Officers.

The regular meeting of the San Mateo County Press Association will take place at San Bruno, on Monday evening of next week, January 6, at 6:30 o'clock.

This association has developed into a live, progressive organization and is doing much to safeguard the interests of its members in this county and other portions of the state.

The membership is composed of representatives from all newspapers, both daily and weekly, published in this county.

Regular business meetings are held on the first Monday of each month in the city selected at each previous meeting. These meeting places rotate, so that each publication center is visited at least once before the rotation begins again. A get-together dinner precedes each gathering.

The meeting last month was held in Daly City, at which The Record acted as host.

Officers for this year, who were elected in December, will assume their new duties at the January session. Following are the new officials: W. E. Pitschke, Daly City Record, president; Sam Winklebleck, Redwood City Tribune, vice president; L. E. Harris, Menlo Park Recorder, secretary-treasurer.

WILD DRIVER IS ARRESTED FOR RECKLESSNESS

Careening Car Halted And Man Taken Into Custody For Speeding

Another careless motorist, Mervyn Carl Shultz of 965 Geary street, San Francisco, was driving through Daly City at a terrific rate of speed about 2:30 o'clock, Monday morning of this week, when apprehended by a local officer. He was placed under arrest and charged with reckless driving.

Shultz was said to have been driving at a speed of 80 miles an hour and in a wild and reckless manner. He almost drove his car into McGraw's drug store. When arrested the man's language became both abusive and insulting. Judge Ellis C. Johnson, set his bail at $100 cash.

Shultz probably will learn that Daly City streets are not to be used as a race track, no matter how light the traffic or how early the hour.

Shultz was fined $50 in local police court on Thursday morning of this week.

DRIVES AUTO AGAINST POLE IN CONFUSION

Street Car Befuddles Auto Driver And He Loses Control

G. Pinelli and his wife and daughter, Irene Pinelli, 12, of 553 Lombard street, were riding north on Mission street about 11:30 p. m. Saturday of last week in the family car, which crashed into a light pole in front of the Daly City Bank.

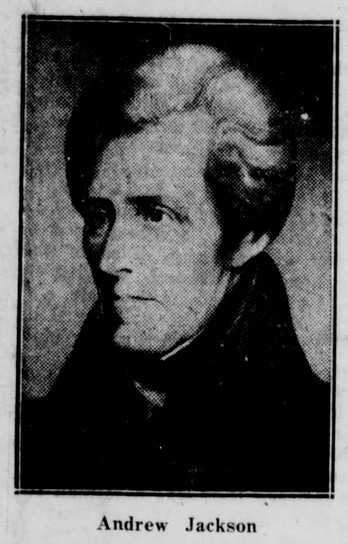
The three occupants sustained slight injuries for which they were treated at the Villa Sanatorium.

Pinelli became confused when he saw a No. 26 car parked in front of the bank. Owing to his confusion, he drove the machine into a light pole on the corner, damaging his car and injuring himself and the other two members of his family.

After the group were treated they returned to the family home.

To Be Honored By Nation Wide Dinners

Franklin D. Roosevelt



Andrew Jackson

Past and present leaders of Democracy to be honored at three thousand dinners in every state in the Union on Jackson Day, January 8. The San Mateo County dinner will be held at Benjamin Franklin Hotel, in San Mateo.

Forty-eight states are massing behind a nation-wide drive to make the coming Jackson Day dinner, Wednesday, January 8, the greatest demonstration in the history of the Democratic party, according to word received from Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic National Committee, by Owen McCue, newly elected president of the Young Democrats of San Mateo County, which organization has accepted the assignment of sponsoring this dinner, to be held in Benjamin Franklin Hotel, San Mateo, at 6:50 p. m. sharp, January 8, 1936.

Frank Wickem, national president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, sent word to Mr. McCue, that there is every indication there will be in the neighborhood of 3000 dinners that night. Having, by their presence there, made a contribution toward the cost of the 1936 campaign, the diners will gather around radios and listen to President Roosevelt, broadcasting from Number One dinner in Washington, fire the opening gun of the campaign.

Reservations for the dinner should be made at once. The San Mateo Club reports good ticket sales and each purchaser will receive a souvenier. The President will come on the radio at 7 o'clock and, following his message, the banquet will be served. R. L. McWilliams, prominent attorney, will be the main speaker.

Officers of the Young Democrats serving during 1936 are: Owen D. McCue, president; Mrs. Irene Signarowitz, vice president, and Leo Keith Jr., secretary-treasurer. The executive committee consists of Judge Hugh Mullin Jr., Claude J. Hirschey, John F. Mager, Robert A. Higgins, Pete Motheral, R. W. Ryan and Rainey Burkhead.

ATTEND LAST RITES

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Davis and children of Los Banos avenue returned home Sunday, after spending a week in Alhambra, where they went to attend the funeral of Mr. Davis' brother who was killed in an automobile accident.

LOCAL POLICE OFFICER PRAISED FOR COURTESY

One Of Daly City's Finest Draws Commendation From Traffic Violator

The following letter, addressed to the City Council of Daly City and read at its meeting Monday evening, is self-explanatory and is reproduced with pleasure by The Record:

"Hon. H. H. Smith, Mayor,
care of City Council,
Daly City, California.

Sir: Most of us are so quick to criticize the Police Department that I am doing an unusual thing in addressing you about the performance of a member of the department who I think is entitled to unusual commendation.

On December 2th at noon I was driving south on the broad boulevard just beyond the end of Mission street when an officer stopped me for a traffic violation. I was unquestionably at fault, but plainly neither reckless nor malicious. The officer reprimanded me for my violation, exercising an unusual degree of courtesy and pleasantness, and, with what I feel was remarkable judgment, instructed me to proceed with his warning. I think that you will agree that the right kind of people appreciate such capable administration of traffic control and I am taking the time to write to you, so that you may know how useful this gentleman is to the department. The occurrence took place a few minutes after 12 o'clock on Thursday, December 12th, and I regret very much that I did not inquire for the officer's name, so that I might make it easier for you if you care to convey my compliments to him. Yours truly,

EDGAR S. BROWNING.

P. S. Have since learned this is Officer William Sunderland."

COUNCIL ACTIVE AT ITS ADJOURNED SESSION MONDAY

Several Ordinances Are Introduced — Planning Commission Reports

Considerable business was transacted at an adjourned meeting of the City Council of Daly City, Monday evening of this week.

A communication from the city of San Mateo asked appointment of a representative to attend a meeting to further the Coyote Point Air Base site. Mayor Smith was appointed.

At request of the California League of Municipalities for a member for its legislative committee, Mayor Smith was named.

Councilmen Selmi, Fahey and Smith were named to attend a meeting of the Peninsula Grade Crossing Conference, to be held at Redwood City next Wednesday, January 8.

A letter was read from a San Francisco citizen commending one of Daly City's police officers for courtesy when the officer stopped the former here for a traffic violation.

The State Franchise Tax Commission requested the names and addresses of city employes. The clerk was instructed to forward same.

The State Division of Highways expressed appreciation for receipt of a letter regarding completion of improvements in re work of widening of Mission street through Daly City.

The city engineer was instructed to prepare and submit an application to the Division of Highways for installation of traffic signal lights at Mission and Market streets.

At this juncture the council recessed and the City Planning Commission was called to order. The commission recommended to the council adoption of certain amend-

THE LUCK OF THE CAMP

This bright-eyed little puppy had a big time of it in the Yule-tide festivities at Warren, Idaho. He was whelped at the properties of the Warren Creek Dredging Company and is the proud pet of Andrew Anderson, dredge master of the company.

The Warren Creek Dredging Company was organized by citizens of Daly City, so our interest in its welfare is natural enough.

LAD ON BICYCLE COLLIDES WITH AGED WOMAN

Young Henry Montana, 9, was riding his bicycle on the sidewalk near his home on Peoria street at about 7 o'clock last Friday evening.

He collided with Mrs. I. Artu of 24 Alexander avenue, who was walking along Peoria street.

The woman, who is an elderly person, was thrown to the street and sustained an injured leg and hip. She was removed to the Villa, where she is now undergoing treatment.

HOMEBREDS ARE MOST LIKELY TO SATISFY

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Some years ago the rhetorical question was asked how it is, proportionately, private breeders produce more winners than are turned out by public breeders. The answer is that the private breeder, such as myself, allows his yearlings to gallop about the paddock until they pass into the trainer's hands, while the public breeder, by force of circumstances, is obliged to pamper and feed up his yearlings to show well in the sales ring.

How often has it been the case that yearlings go from the ring to the trainer of the new owner full of soft, unhealthy fat, instead of being covered with hard muscle. So it is not remarkable many youngsters are permanently ruined by premature training; their new owners want to know if the young ones are of any account, hence the forcing.

The ideal way is to have your own breeding place and to let the babies, as they come along, develop in a natural manner. The thoroughbred is a hardy animal and nothing must be done to make him soft or to retard his natural development.

A great part of the success of breeding operations depends upon the selection of broodmares, the mothers of the champions you are hoping for with all your heart. The experts are pretty well agreed the matrons should be of feminine type, of medium size, well balanced, with strong quarters, deep through the heart, with thin withers and straight hind legs. That is the kind predominating at Heather Farm.

Pocahontas, from which King Heather, premier stallion at my nursery, descends in tail female, through Antrim, Diamontina, Eonette, and others, was 14 hands, 3 inches in height and may be set down as the best broodmare that ever lived. Of course the height of the thoroughbred has gradually increased since the time of Pocahontas—she was foaled ninety-nine years ago—and the average height of the blood horse is greater. Getting beyond sixteen hands, however, does not seem to be desirable in a producer.

Another thing. Daughters of producers are to be sought out. There's not a skip in the long line from Pocahontas, dam of Stockwell, the "Emperor of Stallions," down to Antrim, dam of my "King." Each mare produced high class horses.

PRESIDENT CHOOSES THE WISEST ADVISERS

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

In order to work out almost countless problems in this age of technology, President Roosevelt had the big task of selecting men capable of going along with him. It was one of the most difficult things confronting him in the chaotic country bequeathed to him by his predecessor. It is worth nothing, however, that he made few mistakes.

One of the best moves by the chief executive was the selection of Henry Wallace as secretary of agriculture and the selection of Rexford Tugwell as under secretary of agriculture. Wallace is known throughout the world as an expert on anything connected with farming—the basic industry—and Tugwell is especially noted for his forward-looking point of view.

Francis W. Hirst, writing in the Manchester Guardian, following a tour of inquiry on farming in this country, characterizes Wallace as the "very able" secretary of agriculture. The unprejudiced English authority truly says the main purpose of President Roosevelt's home policy is to place the American farmer on equal terms with the American manufacturer.

Here is a significant paragraph from the Hirst article: "One very important cause of the farming depression and distress since the war, even during the period of manufacturing prosperity, is the American tariff, which has always been maintained at high and almost prohibitive rates on all imported manufactures by the Republican administrations. With the exception of the makers of motor-cars and machinery and of specialties such as typewriters, American manufacturers have always pressed for higher and higher tariff rates."

Rexford Tugwell recently made an address before the American Economic Association that shows well the objects of the administration in working out plans for economic order. Trenchantly pointing out the fallacies of the opposition to the president, Tugwell said brains were exactly what were needed to rescue our nation from selfish interests. As to the desirability of professors in government, he said:

"I dare to hope that we may at last be coming to such an age that we may learn to distinguish what we hope from what we see, so that, with the materials of realty, we may establish our profession once for all as of some other use than the setting up of text-book exercises for children."

The gist of the talk was we must do away with any conditions that may allow a group to use the social mechanism for its own selfish purpose.

A crew of 30 men is reported to be employed on the Smith Creek group of placer claims near Yellow Pine, Idaho. It is planned to operate throughout the winter. The property consists of 19 unpatented placer claims and is held under lease and option by the Smith Creek Hydraulic Mining Company, Ltd. The property is worked with dragline and truck equipment.

FAST DRIVING CAUSES SERIOUS INJURY TO MAN

Automobile Crashes Into Another Then Strikes Motorcycle

Traveling at a high rate of speed on Mission street about 7:30 o'clock, Wednesday evening of this week, a car driven by E. Kelley of San Francisco, crashed into the automobile of John Cochrane, in front of George's Grill, opposite the Daly City Theater.

Kelley's car glanced off and struck the motorcycle of Benny McKell, standing in the street a short distance away. McKell was thrown to the pavement and badly hurt. He is suffering from a sprained right shoulder, a broken right leg and a basal fracture of the skull. The victim was removed to the Villa Sanatorium, where he is still in an unconscious condition.

Officer Kusber was chasing Kelley's car in an endeavor to apprehend the latter for speeding when the accident occurred.

The officer arrested Kelley and placed him in the police car. While the former was giving aid to the stricken man on the pavement, Kelley leaped from the auto and ran down Mission street in the direction of San Francisco. At the same time Officers Bolger and Reardon arrived on the scene and then took charge of the wounded man. Kusber pursued the fleeing man and overtook him at Carr's Service Station and escorted him to the police station, where he was identified by Cochrane and others as the driver of the auto involved in the crash. Kelley disclaimed ownership of the car. A gun was found in the machine.

Kelley was placed in prison, and, on being arraigned in police court on Thursday morning was remanded to jail in default of $500 cash bail.

The car which Kelley was driving is registered in the name of Estelle Loskot, R. F. D., Box 179, Redwood City.

BANKS LENDING ON RETAIL BASIS SAYS CHAIRMAN

A. P. Giannini Says Banks Making Great Strides To Stimulate Business

The following statement has been issued by A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board, Bank of America N. T. & S. A.:

The advent of the year 1936 marks a transition, for recognition is growing that this is a period of change, and from a banking standpoint the changes are for the better.

Since 1933 there has been a constant trend of revision in business and banking in order to meet the need of altered conditions throughout the nation. Under capable governmental guidance these revisions have resulted in a well-planned groundwork for improvement, which has already been reflected in the heartening advancement of business, agricultural and industry.

Similarly, revisions in the existing order of banking have paved the way for better times to come, and those bankers who are sufficiently farsighted to conform to current trends are finding the way clear to vastly better conditions in their field.

In the past the stress of banking service has been upon facilities for big business, and the little fellow has been more or less an outsider with the majority of banks.

Today, in line with Administrative policy, the old order is charging, and it is changing for the good of the greatest number. The little fellow is beginning to come into his own.

Active credit is a stimulant to business, and increased activity of credit was a basic need of the nation as a spur to business recovery. The need is now being met in a way that for the first time gives the individual borrower an equal footing with corporate business.

The government is doing everything in its power to induce the banks to recognize the credit standing of the individual, so that his purchasing power will stimulate business industry.

Foresighted bankers, in co-operation with this move, are making credit available to borrowers on an individual basis.

Heretofore, the majority of the nation's commercial banks have been primarily interested in financing business through commercial loans. Today the trend is toward including the individual in bank financing, through personal loans, modernization loans and automobile finance. In other words, the banks have previously been wholesalers of credit. Today they are becoming lenders on a retail basis.

This is the trend that will be most apparent in banking during ensuing years. It is a trend which is based on a wise conception of the fundamental needs behind this nation's return to prosperity. With this trend in progress, there is every indication of still further business improvement during 1936.

Astronomers say that there are 50 comets continually circling about the planet Jupiter.

SISTERS UNITED IN DOUBLE WEDDING AT LOCAL CHURCH

Grace Church Of The Nazarene Edifice Setting For Ceremony For Popular Girls.

Grace Church of the Nazarene, Vista Grande and Santa Barbara avenues was the setting for the wedding of Miss Winifred Winn and Mr. Ralph Foote and Miss Iris Winn and Mr. Robert Foss, who were married at a double wedding, Friday evening of last week at 8:30 o'clock, the ceremony being performed by an old friend of the Winn family, Reverend C. L. Manning of Santa Cruz.

The brides were dressed alike in ivory satin gowns carrying an arm bouquet of gardenias, lilies of the valley and fresias and wearing a wreath of narcissus in the hair.

Miss Elizabeth Abbott, gowned in pink brocaded silk and carrying pink roses, was the maid of honor for Miss Winifred, while Miss Iris had as her maid of honor her sister, Miss Frances Winn, who was dressed in blue taffeta and also carried pink roses.

Mr. Perry Neff was best man for Mr. Foote and Mr. William Josylin performed the same service for Mr. Foss.

The ushers were John Young and Clarence Fox.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. J. M. Gill sang "Oh Promise Me" and Mr. E. Foss, father of one groom, sang "I Love You Truly". Mrs. Clarence Fox, sister of the brides, played the wedding march.

After the church services a reception for the young couples was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Winn of Miriam street, parents of the brides.

A buffet supper was served to over a hundred relatives and friends. A beautiful wedding cake, with two brides and grooms ornamenting the top, was served to the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Foote left, Saturday evening, for Las Vegas, Nevada, where they will make their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Foss are making their home on Gough street in San Francisco.

Mr. Foss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Foss of Los Banos avenue.

DALY CITY OLD TIMER ENGAGES IN BUSINESS

New Year's Eve saw the opening of Townsend's Inn under new management. The place is located at 6455 Mission street, the same location as before the change.

The new owners are Pete Morgan Sr. and Jim Bergin. Mr. Morgan is an old time resident of this community and has a host of friends who will wish him success in his new venture. His partner was employed at the inn for some time previous to acquiring an interest with Morgan.

Here's hoping the boys do well, as they are both deserving of all the success that comes their way.

VISITS DAUGHTER

Mrs. John Carlson of Los Olivos avenue has been visiting at the home of her daughter in San Francisco, since Monday of this week.

She had been confined to Villa Sanatorium for a week, suffering from a nervous breakdown due to shock at the time of the fire which entirely destroyed the interior of her home on Los Olivos avenue two weeks ago.

MAKE WHOOPEE AHEAD OF TIME

Three days before the New Year, on last Sunday, December 29, to be exact, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Pitschke entertained at a party at their home on Irvington street.

The guests began to arrive early in the afternoon. After all had assembled a sumptuous repast was served consisting of delicious finger rolls from the Relish Bakery and luscious "hot dogs" from the Milo Market (we paid for both items). Delicious cake and salad, prepared by the hostess, was also partaken of.

After having gorged themselves to the utmost, those present enjoyed entertainment at the Daly City Theater (for which we did not pay), witnessing two excellent features, "China Seas" and "The Affair of Susan."

After the show the mob returned to the home of the editor and were entertained at whist, which some played well and others not so well. However, there was a prize for each player. These prizes consisted of various kinds of canned goods from fish to jelly (for which we also paid).

At a late hour the gathering dispersed. All declaring the party a "howling" success, probably because singing was also indulged in.

Among the guests were: From Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Myron G. Cropsey; from Oakland, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Cropsey and sons Giles and Earle, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Cropsey and Mrs. H. E. Green and son and daughter, Harry and Phila, and from San Francisco, Mr. H. Morgan and Miss Doris Harlan.

LOCAL RESIDENT HANGS HIMSELF

The body of Antonio Ferrando was found, Wednesday evening of this week, hanging from a beam in the garage of the family home at 350 Irvington street.

The discovery was made by his sons, Benny and Amando, near midnight, when they arrived home from a theater party and drove their auto into the garage. As they snapped on the lights, the gruesome sight confronted them.

The sons notified the local police, who, in turn, notified Deputy Coroner Luella D. Pepper, who had the remains removed to the undertaking establishment of Lasswell & Co.

The widow, Mrs. Ferrando, declared she knew of no reason why her husband should have done away with himself, as the home conditions had been harmonious at all times. She said she had been conversing with Mr. Ferrando shortly before he had gone downstairs to the garage, giving the time as around 11 o'clock.

PIONEER CITY EMPLOYE DIES

As the Record goes to press, the sad news of the death of an old timer is received. At present we have only a few details, but more of the particulars will appear in next week's issue.

Charles Hilton Langley, 362 Irvington street, passed away at noontime Thursday, while at the home of a neighbor, A. Rovengo. Mr. Langley has no immediate family, but two in-laws (a brother and sister) were very dear to him. He was a brother in law of Dr. Beatty of Tracy.

Mr. Langley was the oldest city employe, having been connected with the Water Department for twenty years.

Plodding steadily along, he faithfully performed his duty to the end.

"Big Ben" Not Name of London Clock, but Bell

Do you know that there's no such clock as Big Ben? That name is given simply to the bell of the clock over the Houses of Parliament. Big Ben's chime is little more than a whisper compared with what it might be, for the bell is cracked, and the huge hammer originally made for it cannot be used in case it might wreck it.

The M. P.'s who sit immediately under Big Ben do not hear it strike until its tones have already been heard in the furthermost corners of the British Isles! Wireless reception is instantaneous; but the sound of Big Ben takes a fraction of a second to reach anybody on the ground who is not "listening in."—London Answers.

City Over 3,300 Years Old Bared by Archeologists

An entire Egyptian city, built 1,390 years before the birth of Christ, for the first time in history has been laid bare in all the splendor of its careful town planning. It was built between Cairo and Luxor by the great Pharaoh Akhenaten, who here tried to rid the Egyptian religion of its abuses.

But the city, with its processional way, coronation hall, and temple of the shining spirit, lasted no more than ten years, passing with its founder. The new pharaoh moved the capital of Egypt to another site, and now John Pendleton heads a party of British excavators who are completing the discovery of this ancient city.

WHAT TECHNOCRACY MEANS

We are indebted to the Vancouver Sun for the explanation below, of a subject which is deeply interesting but little understood by most newspaper readers. The Sun says:

When the average man is told that a modern brick-plant will turn out 400,000 bricks per day per man employed, as compared with 450 bricks per day under old methods, he at once sees that this means the displacement of brick makers.

When the average man is told about Technocracy he is liable to profess to know nothing about it. "Some new fangled theory," he might say and let it go at that.

But Technocracy is simply the outgrowth of the brick plant.

Technocracy is the explanation of technology which is the process of doing man's work. And Technocracy, under Howard Scott, has set to work to tell the people of North America just what science has already done for them.

Here are just occasional samples:

The ancient miller ground 1½ barrels of flour per day; the modern mill grinds 5000 barrels per day.

One power engine in New York is capable of doing more work than all the workmen of Canada.

A man with a spade can dig 1-16 of an acre per day; with a machine he can dig 22 acres per day.

Five men can unload a car of lumber by hand in half a day. Three men with a crane do it in half an hour.

A power shovel moves 30,000 cubic feet of earth per day; the work of 15,000 men.

The first point about all these and a thousand other advances of technology is that they do men out of jobs. As men lose jobs they lose payrolls. As payrolls shrink, buying power goes down. As buying power goes down the consumer market drops, goods pile up at the factories, the factories close.

All this unless the financial and credit machinery is kept up to date with the technology machinery. The ability to buy and use goods creates the standard of living.

If men have the genius to make machines, they have also the genius to put the goods those machines produce into the hands of the people. Plentiful and cheap credit is vital to this continent, if capitalism is to survive.

These are some of the conclusions arising from a study of Technocracy. It is not a theory, but the exposition of a reality.

BEST TIME TO GET YOUR AUTO PLATES FOR YEAR

New Clerks Are Being Trained And Longer Hours Observed

Anticipating the volunme of business which must be accomplished in the newly assigned "first thirty days in January," the local branch of the Division of Registration is now drilling some of the 125 additional clerks to amplify the regular staff during renewal period. All the business heretofore done in six weeks, between the hours of nine and five is to be completed between the hours of 8 a. m. and 9 p. m., Saturdays 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., up to January 30.

Woe be unto him who waits till January 31st, for the new license fee act, passed in the legislature last July, imposes a penalty of doubling the fee by the delay. Expressions heard from dealers and vehicle owners to date are that the extended hours during those thirty days will be of great benefit to many who heretofore found difficulty in making application for new license plates in the nine to five bracket of hours.

It will actually take longer to procure the plates this year because of the conjunction of the new vehicle license fee with the plate fee.

The period between January 5 and January 25 is suggsted as the most desirable in the thirty days as those applying in that time avoid the initial rush and also that created by last minute applicants.

SPARE THE GENERATOR

It does not take long to destroy a generator if the car on which the generator is belt driven is operated with a fan belt broken.

In an emergency, however, it is possible to drive the car to a service station if it is remembered to keep the speed low, say, at not more than fifteen miles an hour.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

FIRE PREVENTION

By Chief A. P. Chesney

In the head of the match lies the reason for the production of fire. This little bulb, in the best of the strike anywhere matches, contains a chemical known as sulphide of phosphorus together with flint, while the strike on the box matches are made with chlorate of potash. The latter substance must be rubbed on phosphorus in order to produce flame, and so the box has phosphorus paint on its sides. The flint particles mentioned are included to generate friction or heat, when the match head is rubbed or struck.

Some match sticks are treated to prevent afterglow and to go out after burning to a certain point. While this is a desirable feature there can be no assurance the match being used is of this type. Therefore, great care must be taken with all matches before throwing them away, and breaking them between the fingers is one way of making sure they are no longer hot.

Provision for discarded matches and cigarettes would greatly minimize the fire hazard from such causes. Ash receivers should be handy wherever smoking is permitted.

CHRISTMAS STORY CONTEST WINNERS

The three following articles are the last of the winners in The Record's recent Christmas Story Contest. They were first, second and third prizes, respectively, from among those submitted by students of the school of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church.

"Mickey's Christmas Eve"

Mickey felt very sad and lonely. Here it was Christmas Eve and he had nothing to do but stand on the cold street corner and sell papers to the passers-by.

It was getting colder and colder; he finally decided that the best thing to do was to go to Mr. Maxons house, and ask him if he could sleep in the attic for the night.

Hurrying along Mickey stepped off the curb just in time to hear the grinding of brakes and to feel the sharp pain, as he was struck down by a speeding auto.

When he awoke Mickey pinched himself to see if he was dreaming. But no, it was all a reality, this lovely white bed in which he lay, this beautiful house, all was real.

As Mickey wondered what it was all about he suddenly heard the door open, and a beautifully dressed women entered.

"Good Morning, dear," she said, unhappily my auto struck you last night, and as we brought you here, I discovered a picture of my sister Bess in that locket which you wear around your neck."

As Mickey stared at her in amazement she said, "Don't you see, dear, I'm your aunt Martha."

Later that evening as Mickey lay cuddled in the lovely white bed, which was now his very own, he thought over the events of the preceding night, and thought that it was the best Christmas Eve that any body could ever have.

Danny's Joyous Christmas

Danny stood and lookked in the big department store window with a look of sorrow in his eyes but a song in his heart! Yes, he was very happy this joyous Christmas Eve.

All too well he remembered his last Christmas, when mother had lain in bed, too sick to send a telegram to Santa Claus. One evening Daddy had disappeared into the cold night just before Santa's would-be-arrival. Danny had been only six years old, but old enough to remember the tragedies of his pitiful household. But God had been good to Danny and his mother in the past year. He had given mother a job sewing the neighbor's dresses and delivering papers in the evenings. Danny helped with all the strength that his little body would allow, until finally he got a job weeding neighbor's gardens and earning his own meager living. But this was not the limit of God's goodness, because Mrs. Jones and her son found a wonderful new daddy, who had not forgotten to phone to Santa Claus this year. They had a tree all decorated with beautiful big lights, and a big fire roared in their tiny fireplace.

No longer did poor Danny have to worry with his dear mother. They were both hoppy and protected from the cold, cold night.

Jane's Kitten

One day Jane and Mary were walking home from school. Mary asked Jane what she wanted for Christmas. She said that she wanted a kitten. "What do you want Mary?"

"I want a doll and buggy and chairs and many other things," replied Mary.

"Here is my house Jane. Goodbye."

"Good-bye Mary."

Jane stopped in at the church which was a block away from her house. She went straight to the altar and knelt down before the Baby Jesus. She asked him to give her a kitten for Christmas, and if he did she would let Him see it before anyone else saw it.

Christmas morning she got up early and went downstairs. There was Christmas Tree.

a gray kitten sitting down under the

Jane ran upstairs and put on her hat and coat, picked up the kitten and ran down the street toward the church.

She took the kitten inside and showed it to Baby Jesus. The priest asked her why she brought the kitten into the church.

She told the priest that she had promised Baby Jesus she would let Him see her kitten before anyone else if He would give it to her.

RELIGION IN THE NEWS

(By Rev. Miles Dawson)

The eyes of the world are on Ethiopia, and questions concerning the religious interests of that country are coming to me. Let me briefly try to answer some of them. Ethiopia has a state church, namely, the Abyssinian Church, which is a branch of the African Coptic Church. It is Christian in nature, but it is not pure. The Jesuits, with their political as wall as missionary zeal, began missionary work there in 1555, and after nearly a century brought King Sasneos to declare the Roman Catholic Church as the state church. But later, Coptic priest compelled the Catholic order to leave the country, and the Coptic Church was again declared the state church. Again, a Protestant missionary, Peter Heyling, from Lubeck, came, but his efforts were to little avail. Years later, both Catholic and Protestant missionaries returned, and their works began to bear fruit, until the disturbances of King Theodore almost ruined their work. They were thrown into prisons, and persecuted, and were released only by the victory of the British. Since that time little missionary work has been attempted in Ethiopia.

But this is not defeat for either Catholics or Protestants, for the work of both is evident even in the Coptic and Abyssinian churches today. There is no fault with the work done by these, but there is much fault, apparently, with the conduct of the state church as it stands today. Vice, drunkeness, and lying is evident among the clergy, who know very little about the Bible of their church. Since 1900, however, Christian missionaries have done something in the way of leading Coptics into purer lives and understanding of truth, and have established churches of their own.

But not all the inhabitants of Ethiopia are members of the state church or Christianity. The nomadic Zalanes consider themselves to be Jews, and keep aloof from Christians. The Chamantes are baptized, and have their priests, but in reality they are nearly pagans and celebrate many thoroughly pagan rites. The Mohammedans make up about one-tenth of the whole population. In order to distinguish themselves from all non-Christians the Christians receive at baptism a blue silk cord, which they always wear around their neck. This cord is called "mateb." Religious interests of this country are diverse, but the more intelligent of this people are accepting Christian doctrine as taught by Catholic and Protestant churches.

SEES GREATER YEAR'S ACTIVITY FOR BUILDING

Statement Of The Senior Vice President Of The Bank Of America

A statement by L. M. Giannini, senior vice president, Bank of America N. T. & S. A., and president, Occidental Life Insurance Company, says:

With every prospect for plentiful money available for contstructive purposes at low rates of interest, and with prospective business in great volume virtually thrust upon the heavy industries, the business outlook for 1936 is extremely wholesome.

Throughout the nation a consistent pick-up in business has been evident throughout 1935. The Chicago area, which was hard-hit by depression, has been particularly outstanding in the recovery during recent months. Detroit, influenced by the foresighted policy of the automobile industry, has reemployed labor to the point that its real estate reports indicate residential vacancies of only 2 per cent.

On the Pacific Coast, we have been fortunate in the velocity of our business recovery. During the past year, according to the Bank of America Index of Far Western Business which stands at 73, the gain amounted to 19 per cent over 1934, which, in turn, improved markedly over 1933.

It is inevitable that there will be more bank lending in 1936. Large expenditures of public funds will pour money into banks and reserves will reach new high levels. There will be greater demand for loanable funds as industry and business attain increased activity.

These inducements to banks to place these moneys to work will be augmented by the competition of insurance companies and building and loan associations, which are already seeking loans actively in the Pacific territory. An additional stimulus to the lending of bank funds is the Banking Act of 1935, which has facilitated national bank loans on real estate.

In view of these factors, it is not only unduly optimistic to predict a very substantial expansion of building activity in the West, and particularly in California, during the ensuing year. Activity under the National Housing Act is still increasing markedly. Every interior town of any importance in California is short in housing facilities and building is going forward wth lengthening strides.

This increased building activity already has had an apparent effect on employment in this state. Skilled artisans are in demand, and because apprenticeships dwindled during the depression period, it appears that before long there will actually be a shortage of skilled labor in the building and allied trades.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O Lord; . . . . For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone." These words from Psalms comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, January 5, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "God." Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. . . . And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God" (Rev. 21: 1, 3).

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "This testimony of Holy Writ sustains the fact in Science, that the heavens and earth to one human consciousness, that consciousness which God bestows, are spiritual, while to another, the unillumined human mind, the vision is material . . . Accompanying this scientific consciousness was another revelation, even the declaration from heaven, supreme harmony, that God, the divine Principle of harmony, is ever with men, and they are His people" (p. 573).

NEEDLESS HASTE ACCIDENT CAUSE

Adjust winter driving schedules to winter travel conditions is urged in emphasizing that needless hurry on the part of motorists is a frequent cause of traffic accidents at this time of year.

Many accidents are directly traceable to the failure of drivers to readjust their daily travel schedules between home and office, store, or plant and make proper allowances for the increased hazards of winter travel, it is said. Trying to make such trips in the same length of time as in seasons of more favorable weather involves chance-taking that applies to motorists and pedestrians alike.

Streets and highways are often wet and slippery and the weather cold, making it more difficult to handle the car safely and tempting pedestrians to plunge hastily into traffic without regard for the dangers.

If a certain daily trip requires thirty minutes in summer, why not deliberately allow forty-five minutes in winter? This additional time will make it possible to drive at a more moderate and cautious pace, make hurrying unnecessary, and result in greatly increased safety.

After losing both arms in the war, Frederich Zinsler of Vienna has learned to play the piano with his toes and makes his living that way.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH SERVICES

At the morning service, Sunday, at the Calvary Baptist Church, 5724 Mission street, Pastor Miles Dawson will conduct a Communion Service, and will speak on the subject, "A Passover Feast In Jericho."

At the 7:45 evening service he will speak on the subject, "The Unseen Captain." The choir will sing Heyward's "That Beautiful Land" in the morning, and the Young People's chorus choir will sing in the evening.

London Tower Fortress, Palace, Prison in Turn

The tower, situated on the banks of the Thames, is perhaps London's most interesting historical monument. Surrounded by a moat, it dates back to the Roman period, and in turn has served the purposes of a fortress, a royal palace, and a state prison. It is now a show place, museum, and military barracks.

The tower has been associated with the darkest scenes of English history. Its oldest part, the White tower, was built by William the Conqueror, outside what then were the walls of the city, to overawe the inhabitants within them. The walls of this Norman work are from 11 to 15 feet thick. In the Wakefield tower, built by Henry III in 1260, lie the crown jewels. The memorial retains an atmosphere of grandeur and grimness unsurpassed in England. Anne Boleyn, mother of Queen Elizabeth, spent her last night there before being beheaded. The spot where she and many other personages were put to death may be seen by all tourists.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line. An experience with a bear helps.

Garth laid down his rifle and came forward. He ignored the wary hostile look of the mining engineer, nodded to Mr. Ramill, and took off his battered hat to bend low before Miss Ramill in a polite bow.

"You are too kind, my dear lady. I could not deprive any of you of your sweets. 'Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow—' You may recall the rest of the quotation."

Mr. Ramill went red. What if Lilith did happen to find these things you were hogging for private use? We need them as much as you."

"Far more so," Garth amended the statement. "I don't need them at all. Go right ahead and waste what's left. You of course are certain there'll be no emergencies on the way out—no occasions when a pinch of tea or sugar may make the difference between life and death for you."

"How frightful," said Huxby.

"Quite so. While you're about it, you may as well make a clean sweep. Here." Garth tossed the gold-mounted cigar case to its owner.

"Oh, so that's how Dad lost his smokes," exclaimed Miss Ramill. "Who's the real sneak around here? Steal all those cigars, and the gold case, too. Then come whining because we've kept you from cheating us out of our share of these things you hid. Hand over the cigars, Dad. My throat's still rasped from the vile smoke of that willow bark Vivian dried for our cigarettes."

Ramill handed the case back to Garth.

"Wa-wait!" cried his daughter.

He waved her away. "No. The joke is on us. He knows what is ahead. We do not. We've emptied the sugarbowl and half the teabag. Tie up that bag and the salt, Vivian, and hand them to him."

Garth shook his head, and bowed to the angry-eyed girl.

"Thank you, no. Miss Ramill has taken charge. As I recall my Anglo-Saxon, 'lady' originally meant breadcutter. She was the one who rationed out the food. I figure upon at least five weeks before we reach the Mackenzie. Miss Ramill will keep charge of the salt and tea—do with them whatever she thinks best."

She flared. "I will not! I'll do no such thing."

"As you please. It's a matter of utter indifference to me. More than once I've gone for two months on meat alone. You're quite welcome to throw these pouches into the fire."

He glanced around, taking stock of the camp.

"Everything in keeping, I see. No sewing done on the moccasins, muffle all eaten, woodpile nearly used up. You'd better cook and eat all the meat you can before the rest of the wood is burnt. When the fire goes out, we'll have plenty of four-footed visitors to relieve us of those moose legs—wolves, foxes, wolverines. Also ravens and moosebirds. Even Mamma Grizzly and her children may turn up."

There followed a silence, broken at last by Miss Ramill. She repeated her first question, but in a very different tone: "Mr. Garth, may I pour you a cup of the tea?"

"Thank you, I do not need it. The rest of you will. I suggest keeping it for breakfast. You'll have no other taste of sweets for over a month, unless we find a bumblebee nest."

The girl silently covered the top of the pot with the inverted tin cup. Her father heaved up his soft bulk. He beckoned to Huxby.

"Come, Vivian. The agreement was that Garth should be skipper. That wood pile will not last another hour. We can't permit any bear raids on our bull market."

The engineer met the quip with a rather thin smile. However, he set about gathering firewood with quickness and efficiency.

Garth lifted one of the moose quarters from the smoke rack and began to cut off large thin slices. These he laid on the poles for quicker smoke curing and drying. He paid no attention to Miss Ramill.

When the girl saw he did not intend to speak to her, she picked up the salt and tea pouches and went into the leanto. Garth thought she meant to go to bed. Instead, she crawled out again, put one of the freshly cut slices of meat on a willow spit, and held it over the end of the fire where the muffle had simmered.

As soon as the steak was broiled, the cook sullenly offered it to Garth. He took it with no betrayal of his surprise, and sat down to eat. "Thank you, sister."

She frowned. "I never hated anyone so much in all my life as I hate you. But that was a mean trick, stealing your sugar."

"All the more reason for you to hate me. Not that it matters a penny—the sugar or your hate. I'll admit, though, it's very interesting to watch the reactions of yourself and your father. Huxby is just a commonplace wolf. But your father and you—the lady of leisure and the millionaire acquirer—tossed from the lap of luxury into the raw wild. You'll have to acknowledge it's high comedy."

"If it is, then you're the clown," was the best she could counter.

He agreed: "That's it, the jester—the fool of the play—the loon who was to have been gulled and bilked. Who knows? He may be yet. But he will have had the fun of the game."

Miss Ramill turned her back on him and went to crawl into the leanto. Her father and Huxby came with still more wood to pile on the already high heap of fuel. The engineer went to lie down at his sleeping place on the lee side of the fire. During the day he had gathered a much thicker bed of spruce tips and dry moss.

The long hours of twilight slowly faded to the semi-dusk of midnight and as slowly brightened towards full day. Sunrise found the three visitors from the cities still asleep. Along with the tea and sugar, they had gorged on the muffle gelatine and the tender lynx meat. Garth did not waken them. He looked speculatively at the smoke rack. All the lynx meat had been eaten. But the wide spread of moose hindquarter slices made a great showing around the two uncut moose forelegs. He decided to let the tongues and the remaining muffle keep on smoke curing.

"You Are Too Kind, My Dear Lady. I Could Not Deprive Any of You of Your Sweets."

Two hours or so later the crack of moose bones under the blows of the belt-ax wakened Huxby. He sat up to turn hungrily in the direction from which came a savory odor. Garth had drawn a thigh bone from the fire and was buttering a piece of broiled meat with hot marrow.

The engineer came around and laid one of the thigh bones on the fire. Above it he slanted a steak on a spit. Neither he nor Garth spoke. He started to eat his steak and marrow before either was more than half cooked.

Garth finished his own breakfast and began to sew a moccasin. As soon as Huxby had bolted down his food, he picked up the emptied gold pan. Miss Ramill had sat up in the front of the leanto to lace her boots. Her father crept out past her.

"Morning, Vivian," he greeted. "I see you're going to set the pan on the fire again. Good idea. That muffle aspic is all Garth told us it would be."

"No." Huxby's tone was almost curt. "We've lost too much time already. I am going to make a complete test of that placer deposit."

He looked with cold wariness at the rightful claimant of the placer. Garth smiled. "Go to it. The more you pan out, the more of my 60 per cent I'll be able to jingle in my pocket."

That sent the engineer off with a crease between his hard eyes. Mr. Ramill studied Garth's amused face.

"What is the idea?" he inquired. "Do we infer you still stand by the terms you offered?"

"Well, I may at least allow you fourtenths of what your Man Friday sweats out of my placer. The laborer is worthy of his hire.—I'm going for a dip. You and Miss Ramill might get your moose bones to roasting. The marrow goes well with the steaks. Let me suggest that you build a large fire in the regular cook hole. When it burns low, rake out the coals and lay in one of the forelegs, thickly smeared with mud. Then rake on dirt, embers and ashes, build a small fire on top, and keep it going four or five hours."

Miss Ramill looked down at her slender hands. They were already roughened and grimed, and two of the highly manicured nails had been broken. The large diamond of her engagement ring flashed blue-white fire up into her angrily flashing blue eyes. She jerked her head up to flare out at Garth. He was already disappearing in the brush on his way to the rock pool.

When he returned from his plunge, a fire was flaming high in the cook hole. Well away from it, the heiress to millions was smearing one of the moose legs with mud brought up from the lake shore by her father in his expensive soft hat.

Garth raked the thigh bones from the smudge-fire and set back the spits of the partly burnt steaks. He then dripped melting moose fat into a small twist-cup of birchbark that he had brought back with him. The cup already held two or three gills of spruce pitch.

The mud-daubers washed their hands in the rill and came for their overcooked breakfast. While Mr. Ramill cracked open the marrow bones with the belt-ax, Garth stirred his dope together with a twig. He took off his hat before starting to smear the dope on his face. Miss Ramill gazed at him.

Garth offered his dope. "Best cosmetic in the North. You may as well go the limit."

"I'll die first!"

Her father dipped his fingers in the dope and smeared the stuff on his face and neck as Garth had done.

Garth said: "Eat your fill. Miss Ramill will stay to tend the fires. You and I are to climb. You'll wear Huxby's leather trousers outside your own."

"But they're too small for me around the belt."

"They'll not be after a few days. You'll wear the jacket also."

A taste of hot marrow roused the girl's appetite. Hunger overcame her other cravings. She said nothing even when, at the end of the meal, her father drew on Huxby's flying suit over his clothes and started off with Garth.

Though Garth had spoken of a climb, he first led along the lake shore to the beginning of the muskeg swamp. Then turned and slanted gradually up through the belt of spruce trees until the west side of the trough was reached at timberline. He stopped to look at Huxby while Mr. Ramill caught his second wind. The mining engineer gave no heed to them. He was hard at work panning out gravel, midway up to the discovery stake.

Garth led across to the east side of the trough. After every halt he started the portly millionaire on again as soon as he could draw a deep breath. They kept plodding up the tundra slope until at last Mr. Ramill's legs gave out. He staggered and collapsed. He lay, purple-faced and quivering, spent.

When able to speak, he gasped an appeal: "Ka-quit! 'U'll kill—me!"

"No such luck," Garth bantered him. "It's only the fat. If it was your heart, you'd have died long before this. Open your coats and let the sun soak in."

The exhausted man turned flat on his back and basked. Within a few minutes he drowsed off. Garth let him nap a long two hours, then started him on up the long climb.

Three hours later found them still below the lower end of the glacier. Garth at last called a halt to the climb. He headed back.

Midway down to timberline, Ramill collapsed, so utterly spent that he could not get up even after a long rest. Garth took him on his back and packed him on down to the camp, without a halt.

Huxby and Miss Ramill were feasting. They had pried the moose leg out of the fire hole and broken off the clay shell. The meat had baked to juicy tenderness. Even the gristle was melted into gelatine.

When Garth laid her father in the leanto, the girl brought a big chunk of the best meat. But the millionaire climber was too exhausted even to eat. His daughter turned upon Garth.

"Another of your damnable jokes! He's dying! You've killed him!"

Garth smiled approvingly. "So, after all, you're capable of feeling a little concern for someone else than yourself. Boil the cup two-thirds full of water, and put in enough of that sweet tea to cool it for drinking."

"The tea is hot already. I've kept back Dad's share. I'll give it to him straight."

"You'll warm that water."

The mining engineer stood up. "I've told you to speak respectfully to Miss Ramill."

Garth paid no more attention to him than to the buzz of a mosquito. The girl looked expectantly at her fiance. He stood waiting for Garth to apologize. When Garth neither replied nor so much as glanced around at him, the engineer's cold assurance gave way to doubt. He turned and went down to the lake.

Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She glanced from his stiff back to the buckskin clad shoulders that had so lightly toted her father into camp. All this had been a matter of seconds. In another moment she was darting over to the rill with the tin cup.

When she came to the leanto with the almost scalding hot mixture of boiled water and tea, her father muttered, between groans, that he did not want it. "No—no! Uh-oh-h! Let me die—in peace!"

Garth heaved up the lax head and shoulders, and held the cup to the quivering lips. "Drink, or I'll pour it down your throat."

A few minutes later the "dying" millionaire began to eat. He bolted down the juicy tender meat until sleep overtook him in the midst of a bite.

"Roll the blanket over him and let him sweat," Garth directed. "He'll wake up a new man. I'll wager he has worked off ten pounds of fat, to say nothing of the toxins he's burned up. Next climb he'll make the foot of the glacier."

Though spoiled, Lilith was far from being a fool. She had begun to realize that to get what she wanted, something more than wishing was necessary. Her father had gone over to Garth. Even Huxby had failed her. She could not believe her fiance a coward. He was undoubtedly brave in his way. Garth had admitted as much. He had called the engineer a wolf, not a fox.

The rub was over for Garth. Miss Ramill's surrender meant that he was now the acknowledged master of the party. Huxby had also admitted the fact by going off, instead of following up his implied threat of attack. He, however, would require watching.

No Evidence That Ships Founder in Sargasso Sea

Sargasso sea is the name given to a region between the Azores and West Indies where seaweed is kept in a slow swirl by the action of the Gulf stream and the equatorial current. The weed collects much in the same way that floating debris collects on the surface of a river back eddy or wash. On his first voyage, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News, Columbus noted this sea. The name comes from the Spanish word sargazo, meaning seaweed.

In the days of small sailing craft, navigation was hindered by the seaweed, and mariners sought to avoid the region. In this way was encouraged the legend that the sea is a graveyard of ships.

A scientific survey of the region was made in 1925 by William Beebe, who headed an expedition sent out by the New York Zoological society. He reported that only at certain seasons do the weeds collect in the "floating meadows" referred to by some observers, and that these surface mats of seaweed are soon scattered by the wind. Beebe cruised for a month in the Sargasso sea and found no rafts of seaweed sufficiently heavy to impede his progress, or even to excite attention. There is no evidence that the storybook references to lost ships floating about in the sea are based on fact.

Naming "Greenwich Village"

Two hundred years and more ago, when New York was only the tip of Manhattan island and the rest was given to pleasant farms, there lay to the north of the city a suburban community which the late Dutch owners had called the Bossen Bouerie. But the English, who had taken over the Dutch colony and renamed New Amsterdam New York, were beginning to call the Bossen Bouerie by the name of the London suburb Greenwich. It is not known exactly when this name was first applied, but a deed of 1721 speaks of "the Bossen Bouerie, alias Greenwich." In subsequent years "Greenwich Village" became a favorite suburban place of residence, until it was finally absorbed by its growing neighbor. But a good many old families still kept their homes within its precincts, and in one way or another it has always maintained sufficient distinctiveness to keep its name alive.

Castle Is Famed

The tiny city of Eisenach, Germany, famed for historic Wartburg catle, is also the place where Martin Luther retired under the pseudonym of "Junker Georg" to translate the Bible into German.

Big Tree Forests Once Stood Over Eastern U. S.

Great forests of sequoia trees, related to the Big Trees of California and the coast redwoods of the Pacific slope, once stood over most of what is now the United States. New finds of their remains have recently been made, and are now in possession of the Smithsonian institution in Washington, where they are being studied by Dr. R. W. Brown of the United States Geological Survey.

One lot of specimens consists of an ancient driftwood deposit found in Maryland, near Washington, and the other is of sequoia cones from the Cannonball river region in North Dakota. No cones were found in the Maryland deposit, but it is considered likely that some of the logs are of redwood; sequoia cones have been found in other Maryland deposits. The trees in both collections are of Cretaceous geological age, about 120,000,000 years ago.—Science Service.

Tribe Hides Bride's Face From Groom for 9 Days

Social life is complicated among Guajiro Indians of Venezuela.

Dr. Vincenzo Petrullo, whose expedition for the University museum, Philadelphia, sought out the little known Guajiro tribe, explains that girls are locked up when they reach marriageable age, and can be seen only by their families. Even the suitor who marries one of them will not see her face until nine days after the wedding, though he spends the nine nights of his honeymoon with her, leaving her, as custom demands, before daylight.—Science Service.

COASTSIDE WILL BE DEVELOPED BY NEW OPERATION

Rapid development of the Coastside area will accompany the placing in operation again of the Ocean Shore Railroad, it is predicted by agricultural and industrial leaders. Further evidence supporting this prediction is being gathered daily by traffic men of the railroad, who are now conducting surveys throughout the Coastside district.

"Real estate men are joining with agriculturists and industrial leaders in declaring that the coming of the railroad will bring about tremendous development of the Coastside area," Harry W. Cole said. "Real estate men very definitely agree that the railroad will bring a great growth in homes. Commuters will find the Coastside an ideal home area within easy reach of San Francisco because of its mild climate and beautiful scenery which is unequaled in any part of the world."

Support of this view was expressed by M. S. Woodhams, La Honda attorney and large land owner of San Mateo County, after a thorough investigation of the railroad plans. Woodhams, who made his investigations because of his interest in securing the Coast highway, declared that he is convinced the backers of the Ocean Shore Railroad will rehabilitate the railroad and that the placing of the line in operation again will be untold value to the Coastside.

MOUNTING TIRES

When mounting tires care should be taken to see that all mud, dirt or other foreign matter is removed from the hub and flanges, with particular attention to the countersunk holes where the lugs fit.

Many wheels have been damaged, due to their coming loose either as a result of dirt being present or failure to tighten the wheel lugs properly, or to both these causes.

Some day a statistician with originality may figure out how far things would reach if laid side to side, instead of end to end.

SOLAR TOWER

McMath, Detroit engineer and amateur astronomer, whose success in making moving pictures of cyclonic disturbances on the sun has made him world famous in the astronomic field. Rising 55 feet above the ground and extending 34 feet below to a six-inch diffraction grating, the silver-domed solar tower is expected to be the finest and most successful in the world when it is completed next April.

BRAKE DRUM DAMAGE

Brake drums are often damaged as a result of the car owner neglecting to have brakes relined before the lining wears through to the rivets.

If rivets are allowed to come in contact with the drum, deep scratches or scoring may result and require truing up or replacement.

Time To Clean Motor

Before the rainy season gets under way it is a good plan to have the outside of the motor thoroughly cleaned.

Oil, grease, and grit accumulations often cover badly worn or leaky insulation, thereby contributing to short circuits and other motor troubles.

HOG RANCH BILL STIRS WORDY WAR AT BOARD MEET

Rodent Menace Disclosure Made By Supervisor Witt During Argument

Preliminary approval on Monday by the Board of Supervisors of a new ordinance licensing hog raisers precipitated an argument between Supervisor Al Witt of First Township and Winfield Scott, secretary of the County Civic League.

According to terms of the ordinance, which was read at Monday's meeting in tentative form, an inspector will be employed to enforce all sanitary provisions of the ordinance and to activity inaugurate a war against rodents around the pigsties. According to the ordinance the salary and expense of the inspector will be paid from a $100 per farm tax, and are under no circumstances to be paid from county funds.

It was against this inspector that Scott, for the league, lodged his protest, and which drew from Witt a hot reply.

"A lot of good people belong to the Civic League," said Witt, "but they sometimes have private investigators who go into a proposition and then give a 'colored' picture."

The supervisors declared that the hog ordinance was drawn up expressly with the purpose of eliminating rodents from the hog farms and to enforce the sanitary provisions of the ordinance to protect passers-by from odors and the hogs from infection.

Witt said that government officials went into the north end of the county last year and caught "one ton of rats" in a short time.

This statement was corroborated by Dr. Charles Gans, county health officer, who said the rodent problem had to be constantly watched in order to prevent any plague outbreaks such as occurred in San Francisco in 1911.

The tentative ordinance was approved by the supervisors and referred to the district attorney's office to be drawn up in proper form and submitted to the board for possible passage next week.

A number of hog raisers from the northern part of the county were on hand to speak in favor of the regulatory measure.

CHECK STEERING GEAR

When steering mechanism shows any sign of being out of order the car should be taken to a repair shop at once.

Even when traveling over a road which appears to be smooth the steering linkage and steering gear is constantly in motion. Frequent inspectaion of steering gear is one of the most important items in connection with maintainance and operation of an automobile.

SNUG SHACKLE BOLTS

Spring shackle bolts should be snug but they should not be tight enough to bind.

If the bolts are adjusted too tightly the car will ride too stiffly and there is also danger of breaking the main spring leaf.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Arthur Eide, well known resident of the Seward Peninsula arrived in Seattle recently after a summer spent in the Nome District.

Eide reports considerable increase in mining activity in that section, more particularly in the Kougerok district. He brought out a little present for James Kelliher, an old time Alaskan mining man, now living at the Frye Hotel in Seattle, in shape of amoosehide sack of gold dust, a present from Kelliher's son, Morris Kelliher, who has been working some ground of his there. Eide said that the cleanup possibly represented a couple of thousand dollars when cleaned up.

As a sample of "sourdough" business, the sending of the sack of dust to Kelliher by his son is characteristic of the olden days. Eide was on the motorship Meteor bound for Seattle when Morris Kelliher came on board. He tossed the sack in on Eide's bunk and asked that when he arrived in Seattle, he would give it to his father the first time he saw him.

The past twelve months have seen the population of Homer, located near Seldovia on Cook Inlet, doubled by newcomers arriving from the States. Homerites are proud of the fact that these people came without government aid or subsidization, attracted only by the reports of the fine location and equitable climate. These new people are inspired with the true, rugged pioneering spirit of those early hustlers who have built up regions in California, Oregon and Washington.

R. G. Winns, president of the International Highway Gold Mining and Explortation Co., Inc., announces that this company has closed a deal and taken over an important placer property located on McDames Creek, Cassiar, B. C.

The deal also includes a complete dragline dredge and all other necessary equipment which is now located on the property and ready for next spring's operations. This operation will be in addition to ground sluicing operations on adjoining property belonging to the company.

The Nelson mining division, which includes Sheep Creek, Ymir and Erie districts, will go into the new year with aggregate gold production at the rate of $2,600,000 annually.

Under these conditions it is little wonder that Nelson, undisputed capital of the entire area, shows remarkable activity and an air of stabilized prosperity.

With a population of 6,000, according to the last count, gold production is worth around $450 a head for every man, woman and child in the city, or, say, ten times that amount in credit.

The population of the entire area is somewhere around 8000, so that the gold output works out at nearly $300 a head, after taking in the outside areas, or credit basis for $3000 a head.

That is a situation not duplicated many times, if any, in Canada. Possibly Timmins, at Porcupine, and Kirkland Lake, Ontario, can show as satisfactory conditions, Trail is also well up in the front rank, but outside of those points, it would be difficult to find a city or town in the Dominion in better shape than Nelson, and almost wholly from production of the fundamental basis of values—gold.

James Birmingham, property owner in the Mayo silver-lead district of Yukon Territory, brings word of the purchase of the Langham-Major group of claims by South African Goldfields Consolidated.

The property lies at Free Gold Mountain, 25 miles west of Carmacks, which is 125 miles down the Yukon River from Whitehorse.

The Timmins-Hollinger interests of Montreal are reported to have spent $60,000 in development during the previous year and then abandoned the project, owing it is believed, to what was considered excessive price.

A substantial payment has already been made by South African Goldfields. The property shows seven or eight parallel free-gold quartz veins from three to four feet wide.

Richard Langdon has spent the past seven months in the Cariboo district, the last three in the Hixon Creek area,

He says that as the result of investigations this season the easterly bank of the old Hixon Creek channel has been found showing excellent values. The gravel lies under glacial drift, and the gold exhibited cannot have moved far, being quite coarse and rough.

Douglas Lay, M. E., government resident engineer for the Cariboo district, has made four visits this year, and has recommended a geological survey of the area next season.

Members of the Northwest Mining Association resolutions committee will urge free coinage of silver and complete bimetallism in terms "stronger than ever before."

SIGNAL TO BE SURE OF MOTORING SAFETY

One of the golden rules of automobile driving is "signal properly," according to E. Raymond Cato, chief of California Highway Patrol.

The rules are simple, says Cato in calling attention to the fact that the proper signal nine out of ten times is a guarantee of safety for the person who makes it. Here are the signal rules as set down in the new Vehicle Code:

Stop or sudden decrease of speed: Extend left arm downward beyond the side of the vehicle.

All signals must be given in the last 50 feet of travel.

DANCING TEAM NEXT ATTRACTION AT DALY CITY

Local Show House Soon To Show High Class Film In "Top Hat"

Gay, romantic, tuneful and altogether delightful, "Top Hat" must be marked as another crowning triumph for Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and RKO Radio. Unquestionably, the star team and studio which gave the screen "Flying Down to Rio," "The Gay Divorcee" and "Roberta" has delivered another smashing entertainment hit, which will show at the Daly City Theater, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, January 5, 6, and 7.

Hooking up the superlative dancing abilities of Astaire and Miss Rogers with the melodies of Irving Berlin proves to be a master stroke of concentrated entertainment values. Berlin never has written more catchy, ingratiating songs than he did for "Top Hat" and the way that Astaire and Miss Rogers put over the numbers, both in dancing and in singing, leaves nothing to be desired.

The various song and dance numbers all are novel and brilliantly executed. Because of the color of its setting and the fact that it is hailed as a successor to the "Carioca" and the "Continental," the feature dance, the "Piccolino," deserves special mention. A dance of haunting Italian rhythm, it is done with supesrb grace by Astaire and Miss Rogers, against a background embracing canals with drifting gondolas. An ensemble arrangement of the number is also done by a large mixed chorus. Other brilliant numbers are: "No Strings," "Cheek to Cheek," "Top Hat." "Isn't This a Lovely Day?" and "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan."

Mark Sandrich directed this Pandro S. Berman production.

Also on the same program, "His Family Tree," James Barton and Maureen Delaney.

After a honeymoon motor trip to Monterey, Carmel and Santa Cruz, Mr. and Mrs. Crudo will make their home on Theta avenue in Daly City.

POPULAR COUPLE IN HOME WEDDING

Miss Bernice Becker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Becker of Los Olivos avenue, became the bride of Mr. Dave Blumb of Newman, Tuesday evening of this week, at 8 o'clock at the home of her parents.

Rabbi Bernstien, of Geary street Temple in San Francisco, performed the ceremony.

The bride was prettily gowned in ivory satin and wore a long tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Esther Becker, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore an old rose taffeta gown and carried lilies of the valley.

Leo Becker, brother of the bride, was best man.

After the ceremony a recpetion was held in honor of the young couple, about 150 relatives and friends attending.

Mr. and Mrs. Blumb left for a honeymoon motor trip to Yosemite Valley and on their return will make their home on Los Olivos avenue.

DINNER GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Lowry of Risel street entertained a group of friends at dinner, Saturday evening of last week.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. D. Delt, and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Swenson and son. The evening was spent playing cards.

UNATTENDED CAR RUNS DOWN HILL

Tuesday morning, about 3:35 o'clock, an automobile owned by C. E. Schey of 745 Bellevue avenue, ran down hill on Bellevue avenue about 300 feet without a driver and struck a light pole at the corner of Roosevelt avenue.

Mr. Schey, claims the brakes released by some one, allowed the car to roll down hill.

It was necessary to have the car towed to a garage for repairs.
